Sawasdee,

The Tourism Authority of Thailand (TAT) and MasterCard Worldwide are pleased to continue the well-regarded 72 Hours Amazing Thailand travel guide series with a natural wonderland of Thailand, Krabi.

For many who journey to Thailand, Krabi has become a more eco-friendly alternative destination to the better known but also more commercialized Phuket. Kayaking, sailing, birdwatching, snorkeling are among the favorite activities in this province, which has developed much slower and more carefully than many other places in Thailand, allowing for preservation of an abundance of natural beauty.

The most popular areas for tourists visiting Krabi are Ao Nang and Railay, known for its fine white sand beaches, aquamarine sea, fantastical limestone scenery, excellent rock climbing, memorable sunsets, and laid-back atmosphere. Just offshore small islands abound with beautiful white coral sand beaches and crystal clear water. Of course one of Thailand's must-visit small island destinations lies a short boat ride away: the world-renowned Phi Phi Islands. On the smaller of these islands, there is a sheltered bay full of coral and surrounded by towering cliffs; this is the real-life setting for the idyllic seafront in the Leonardo DiCaprio film The Beach.

Beyond the beach, the interior of Krabi offers natural beauty in the form of hot springs, waterfalls and caves, and limpid lakes in pristine forest, with abundant opportunities for trekking and birdwatching through national parks. And while natural attractions are the main draw in Krabi, there are man-made wonders like Tiger Cave Temple (or Wat Tham Suea) in the Ao Luk Thanu mountain range, as well as the flavorful and fiery local cuisine.

Development in Krabi has proceeded at a leisurely pace, but it is not difficult to get around, with a good variety of accommodation options fitting every taste. Come discover one of Thailand's natural treasures, and let this 72 Hours Amazing Thailand guide act as your treasure map to a magical holiday in Krabi.

Three easy steps on How to Use the 72 Hours Amazing Krabi & Beyond Guidebook

KRABI
AND BEYOND

Nothing is better than abiding in an Andaman paradise made up with a variety of picturesque sceneries from more than hundred islands, in which white sandy beaches stretch welcoming all the tourists to enjoy sea breeze and sunshine like Maya Beach, once captured in a Hollywood film, mangrove forests still untouched by the civilization to waterfalls, natural wonder not to be missed. Krabi, is a one-stop place for all this is, therefore, it is absolutely a perfect place for those who yearn for a short stay but long memory to be remembered.

Krabi Beach

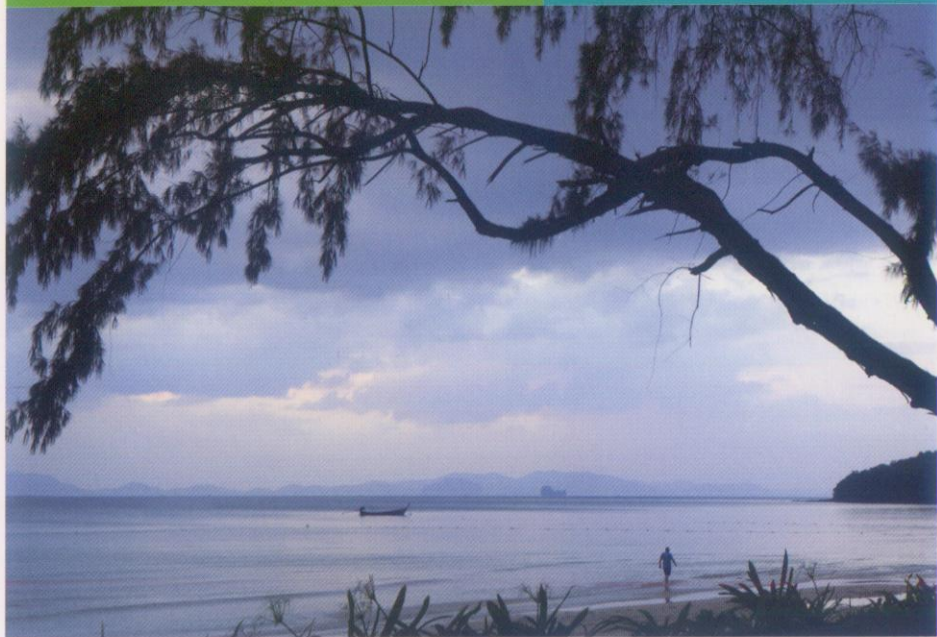

Visiting Route

Tubkaak Beach

Without leaving the mainland, you can find one of the most tranquil Krabi beaches at Tubkaak. A 20-minute drive from Ao Nang and just north of Klong Muang, this sandy beach looks out toward Ko Hong and other islands rising up from the Andaman Sea. This is the place to go for some seclusion from the hustle of more developed areas as only a few hotels occupy this stretch of coastline. Rich natural forest backs up the coastline. You can find luxury boutique hotels here with beach access for a most private and relaxing stay.

Visiting Route Klong Muang Beach

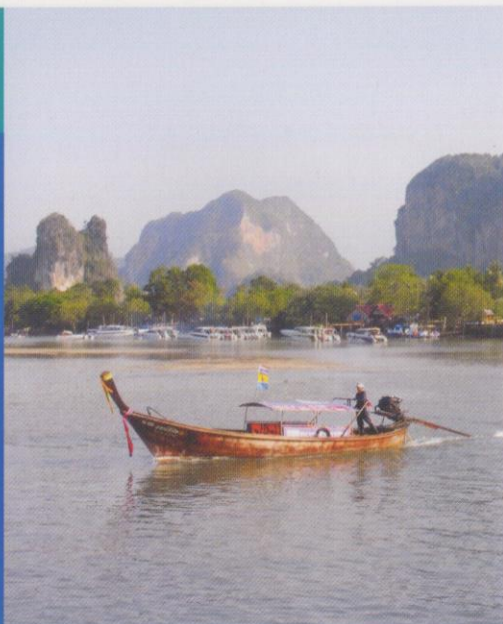

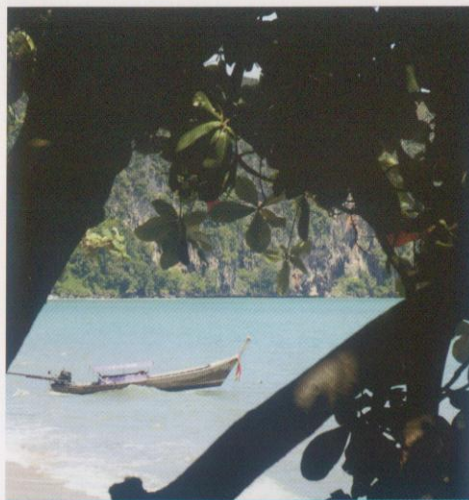

As Krabi brings in more and more tourists, it becomes nearly impossible to have a beach to yourself. Klong Muang, however, still remains far from the madding crowd. Located farther up the coast from Ao Nang, this stretch of clean, light sand lacks the development that would bring more beachgoers. A major point separates it from the towns farther south. A visit here is peaceful and idyllic, more for the contemplative than the adventure seeker. Dine on local seafood, stay in a beach bungalow or one of the few fine resorts, and enjoy an unspoiled day at the beach.

Visiting Route

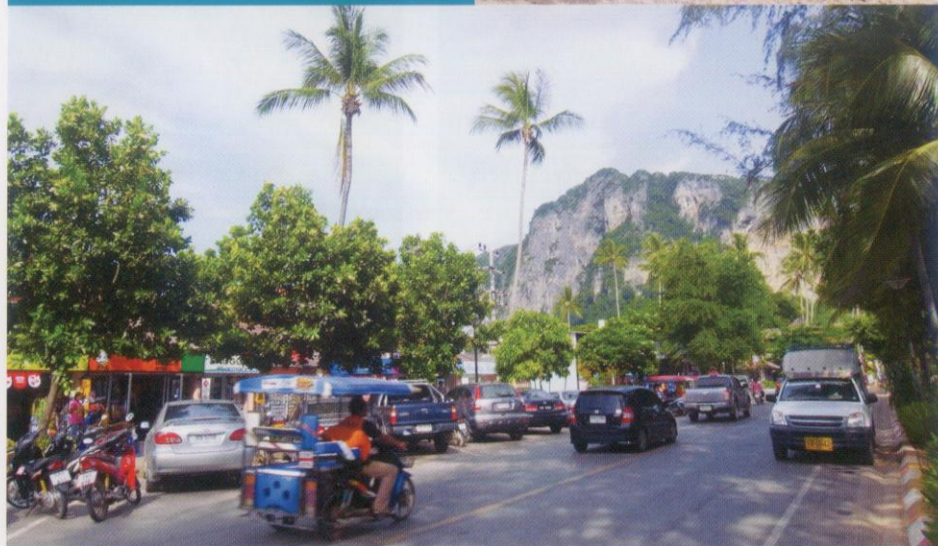

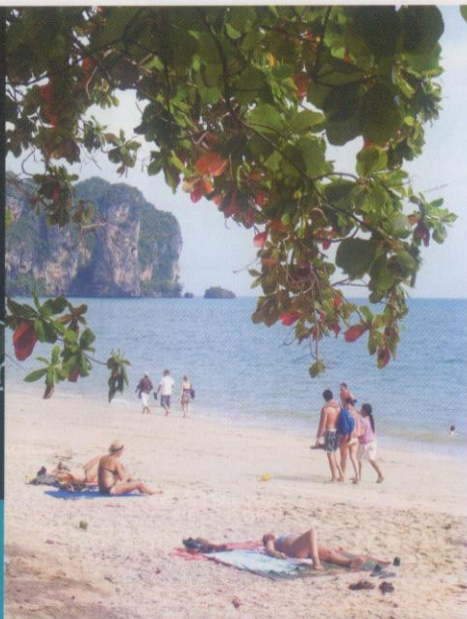

Nopparat Thara Beach

Casuarina trees bring some shade along the edges of this beach which stretches almost 3 kilometers just west of Ao Nang. Thai picnickers come to lounge on the beach or wade in the water just offshore. Walk along the beach of coarse sand and broken seashells, and at low tide, wade out to some nearby rocky islands. The beach is part of Nopparat Thara - Ko Phi Phi National Park. Locals may refer to it as Hat Khlong Haeng or Dried Canal Beach because the channel empties at low tide and the beach becomes long and wide.

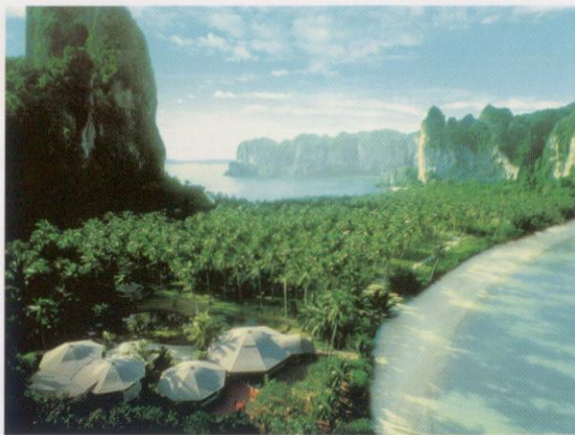

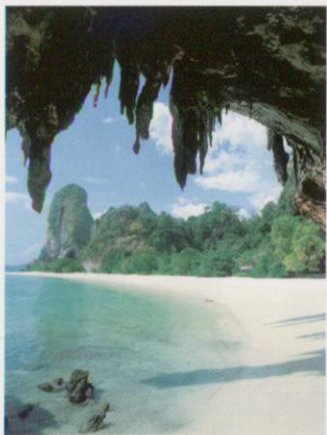

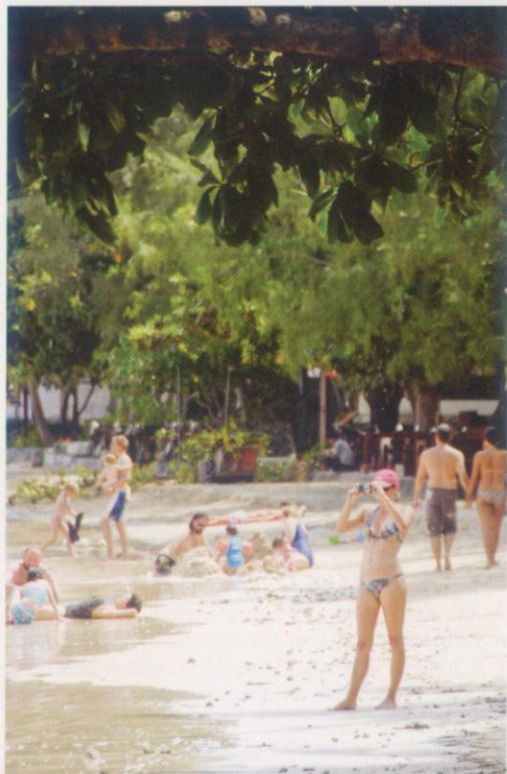

Visiting Route Ao Nang Beach

Ao Nang Beach sits right at the edge of the town with the same name and looks out into the Andaman Sea. Limestone cliffs border the beach to the east making for some dramatic scenery, and Nopparat Thara Beach is a short stroll along the main road to the west. The beach has a wide stretch of packed wet sand at the water's edge making it good for a stroll and the sea is shallow here. This is also the starting point for island boat tours and the connection to Rai Le so expect to see many boats anchored offshore or run up into the sand. The sunset is magical with silhouettes of long-tail boats and nearby islands, and the beach has easy access, just steps from the shops, bars and restaurants along Ao Nang's main drag.

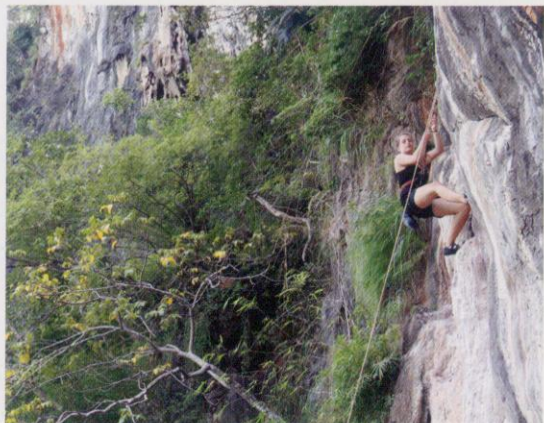

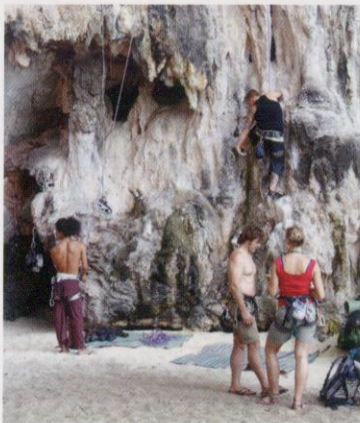

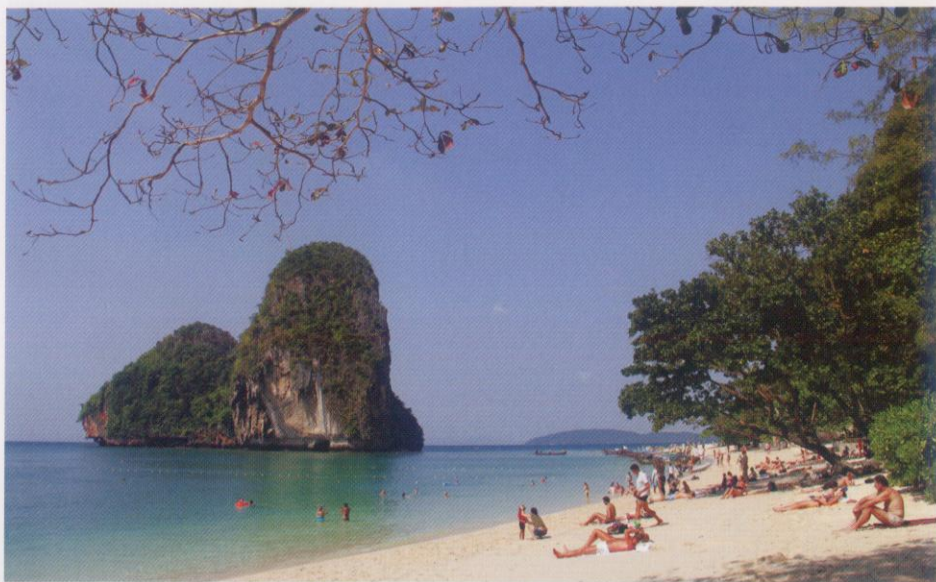

Visiting Route Phra Nang Beach

Also the location of Phra Nang Cave, this beach is the most popular on the Phra Nang peninsula which is home of the popular climbing and backpacking enclave of Rai Le. The only lodgings and facilities here are at the luxurious Rayavadee Resort. Daytrippers can arrive either from Rai Le or by taking a long-tail boat from Ao Nang. Travelers come to snorkel, lie on the beach or visit the famous fertility shrine located in a cave beneath the limestone cliff. A small island just offshore can be reached by wading at low tide and offers a bit of coral reef. In the afternoon, food vendors arrive in long-tail boats to serve the beach crowd some lunch.

Visiting Route Ao Rai Lay

Pick a side: Rai Le East or Rai Le West? A narrow strip of land unites the wall of limestone karst columns on the mainland with those of a point jutting into the Andaman Sea. Coming in from Ao Nang, long-tail boats maneuver through the rocks on the west side to drop off visitors on the wide sandy beach. To the east is another beach with the sea right up to the narrow crescent strip of sand during high tide and out past mud flats at low tide. Boats bring in travelers here as well from Krabi Town and Ao Nam Mao. Many come to lie in the sun in between rock climbing on the surrounding cliffs and partying at night.

Visiting Route Maya Beach

One of Thailand's most famous beaches, Maya Beach has a bit of Hollywood stardom as it played a setting in the Leonardo DiCaprio film The Beach. Surrounded by towering cliffs, the sheltered bay full of coral reef is a popular stop for boats full of snorkelers. A 200-meter beach of fine, white sand draws the sunbathers. At low tide other smaller patches of shoreline emerge for a more private beach experience, relatively speaking. Come early or late in the day to avoid the peak tourist times when boats line up along shore. As part of Phi Phi Islands National Park there is an admission fee and some basic facilities along the beach.

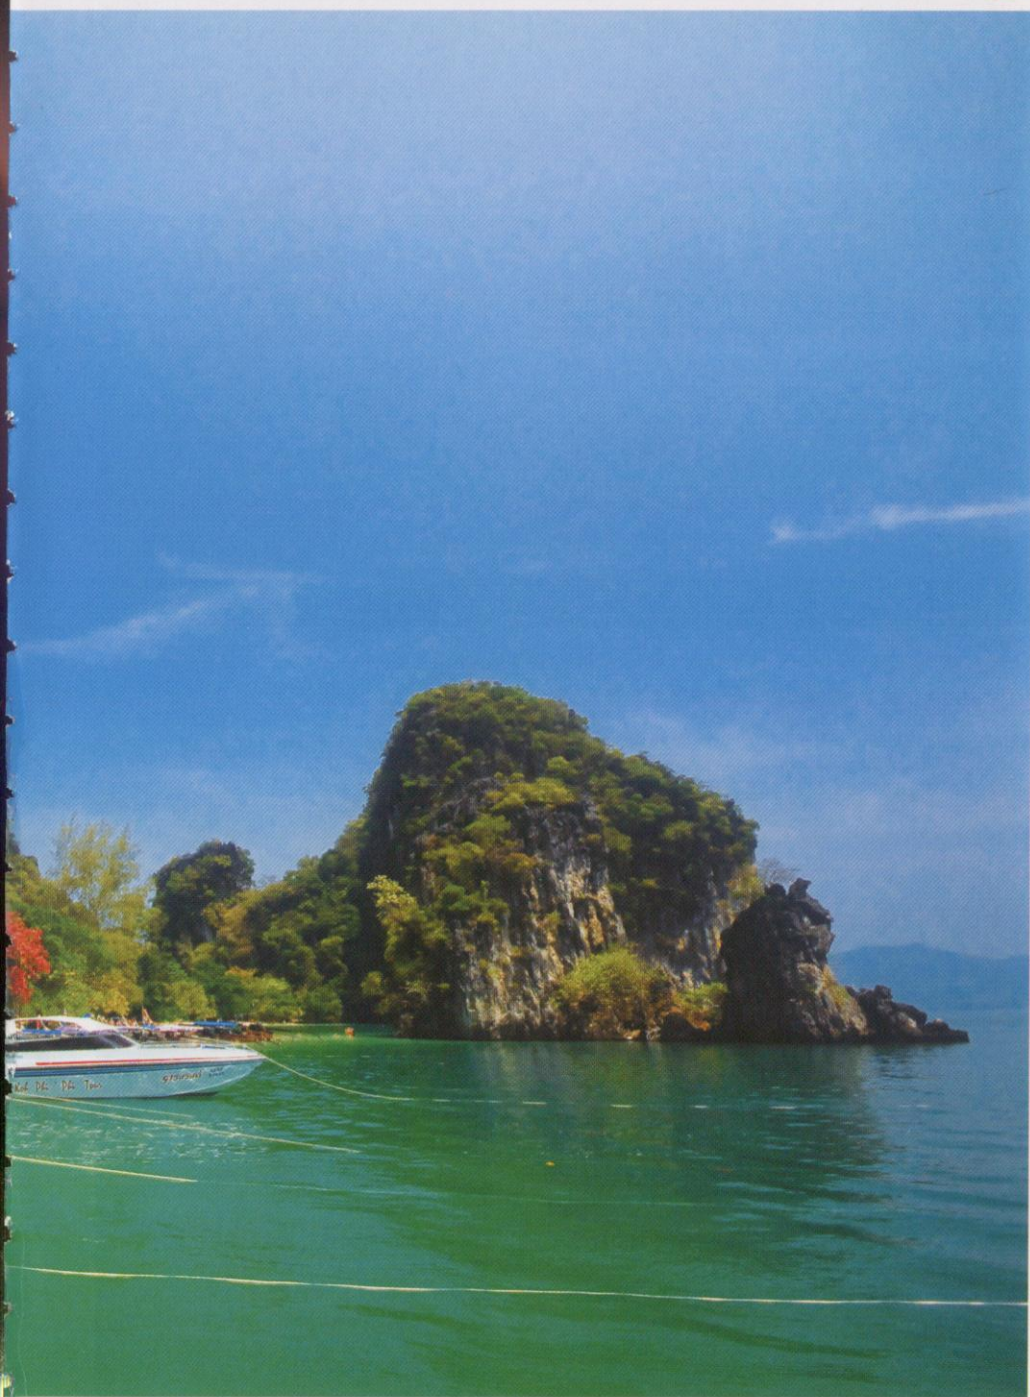

Visiting Route Ao Nam Mao

Most people might not even know this beach is here. The small stretch of golden sand becomes a rocky shoreline when the tide is out so it is not particularly good for swimming. A few small resorts and bungalows are nearby and though the bay is close to Krabi, it has a certain isolated quality to it. Nearby is Gastropod Fossil Beach.

Visiting Route Ko Poda

Often part of a long-tail boat tour out of Ao Nang, Ko Poda is a perfect little stop for a beautiful beach. The island isn't even 700 meters across, yet it is surrounded by a lush, green interior coastline of soft, white sand. Daytrippers swim here or lie in the sun, but snorkelers will be more interested in the reef which lies just 20 meters out. There is also a small resort with a restaurant on the island if you are interested in spending a bit more time than a boat tour would allow.

Visiting Route Ko Kai and Ko Tub

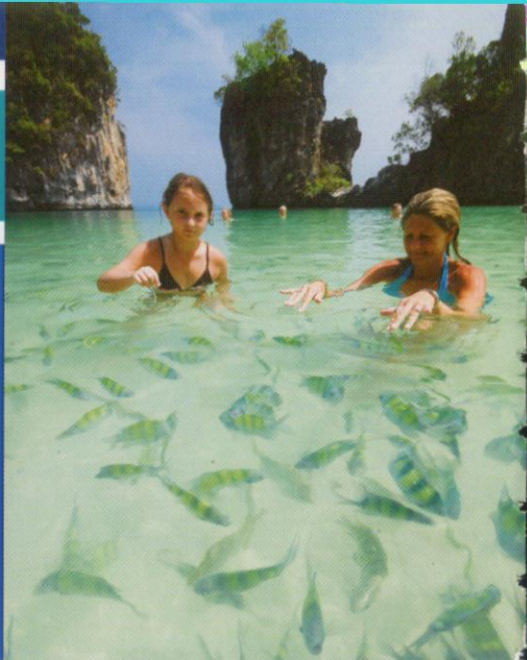

Rocky on one side and with a small beach on the other, the island was dubbed Chicken Island for a rock formation that resembles the head and neck of the bird. But Ko Kai is also known for its unusual low-tide beach. When the water level drops a narrow spit of sand emerges to connect the island with another, Ko Tub. This beach is known as one of the Unseen Thailand destinations and makes for an impressive photo. Swimming and snorkeling are nice just off shore.

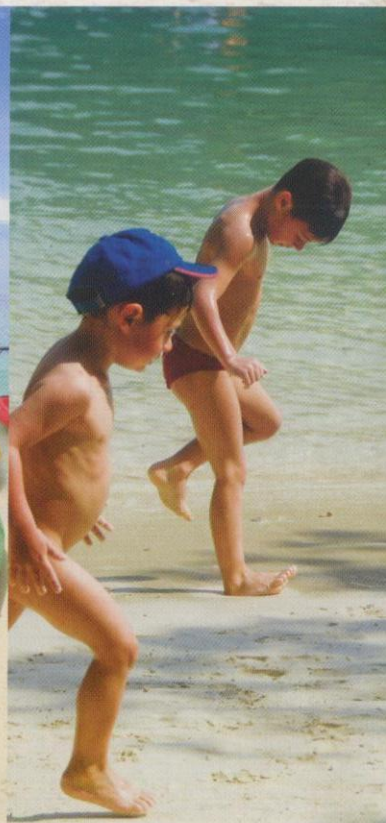

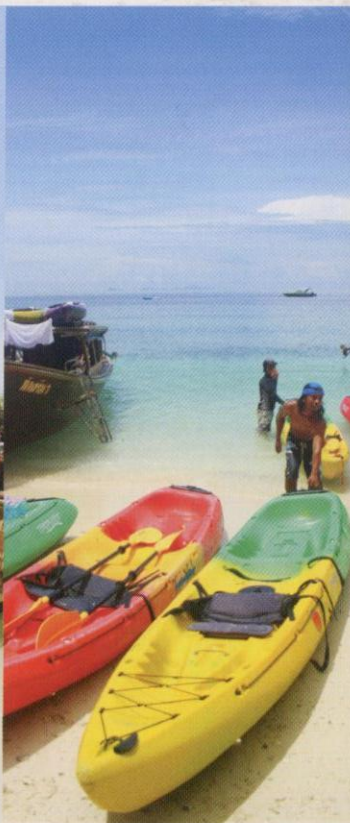

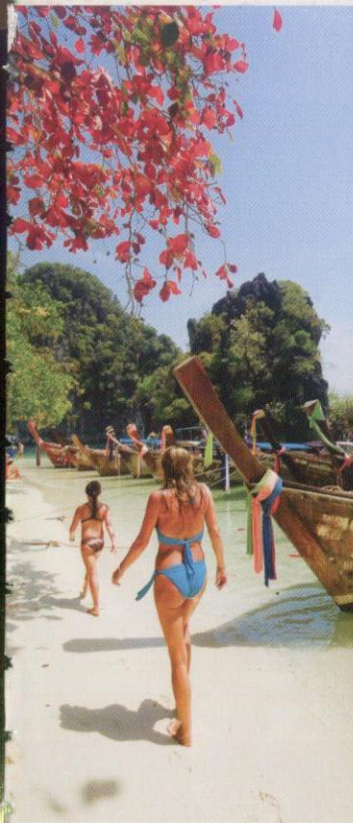

Visiting Route

Ko Hong

Hong Island is the star of the Five Islands Tour. The island offers a beautiful swimming area, a bay a bit smaller than Maya Bay in Phi Phi Le Island. You can walk into the forest a bit here or snorkel along the rocky ledges of the bay. The sand makes a half moon beach around a swimming area away from the boats. At high tide boats can enter a hidden lagoon in the center of the island. Low tide means you need a kayak. Either way, it is a sight you won't easily forget.

Visiting Route

Phi Phi Don

This is the largest of the Phi Phi Islands and the only one with permanent residents. Boat connections to the islands from the mainland arrive here. In the center of the island is Tonsai Village, the main town set on a narrow strip of land with beaches and Ton Sai and Loh Dalum Bays on either side or most of the resorts. However, there are also a few places to stay scattered around the island as well, and associated with smaller, isolated beaches. Most of the island is green-covered and mountainous and getting around beyond Tonsai Village is done only by water taxi. The atmosphere is laid back and bohemian but don't let that convince you this is a sleepy place. Nightlife includes a number of bars pumping out music and even the occasional muay Thai (Thai boxing) match. Dive shops are numerous giving you a pretty good idea that the underwater activity is a big draw.

Visiting Route

Mai Pai Islands

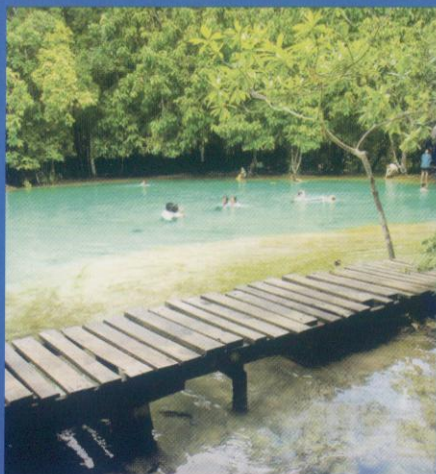

Ko Mai Pai and Ko Yung are sister islands located just north of Phi Phi Don Island. What makes them so special is their sense of isolation. Completely uninhabited and surrounded by smooth, flawless sand beaches, Mai Pai gives visitors a sense of being stranded on the proverbial desert island. The only structure there is an old national park office. Ko Yung on the other hand is smaller and rocky. The waters around these islands teem with sea life, and the snorkeling and diving are impressive. Expect lovely coral gardens, abundant colorful reef fish, and even the occasional leopard shark. Travelers can reach the islands in about 30 minutes by long-tail boat from Phi Phi Don Island.

Water Fall

Than Bok Khorani National Park

Once a land of elephants, this 104-square-kilometer park now harbors a variety of smaller animals such as otters, gibbons, flying lemur and mouse deer, as well as a numerous species of birds and reptiles. Also part of its domain is 23 islands in the Andaman Sea including Hong Island. Riddled with underground streams and caves and showing limestone rock towers, the park is primarily located in a valley. Plant coverage ranges from rainforest and freshwater swamp forest to mangrove forest. Attractions include a waterfall of the same name, Morakot Pond and some prehistoric cave paintings. But don't miss a tour to the islands for snorkeling, diving or kayaking.

Visiting Route

Ao Tha Lane

This small fishing village up the coast from Ao Nang is protected from the Andaman Sea by a series of limestone mountains standing just offshore. The rocks found here are some 300 million years old. Insert Period Channels of sea water create a network of water trails among the rocky spires perfect for exploring by kayak. Langurs and long-tail macaques occupy these hills and come down with curiosity to see who has entered their realm. Some may even swim out to kayakers and climb aboard for the ride. Kingfishers hunt the waters and crabs and mudskippers line the shores. Paddling among these towers is an incredible experience for nature lovers, and is a bit off the beaten tourist path.

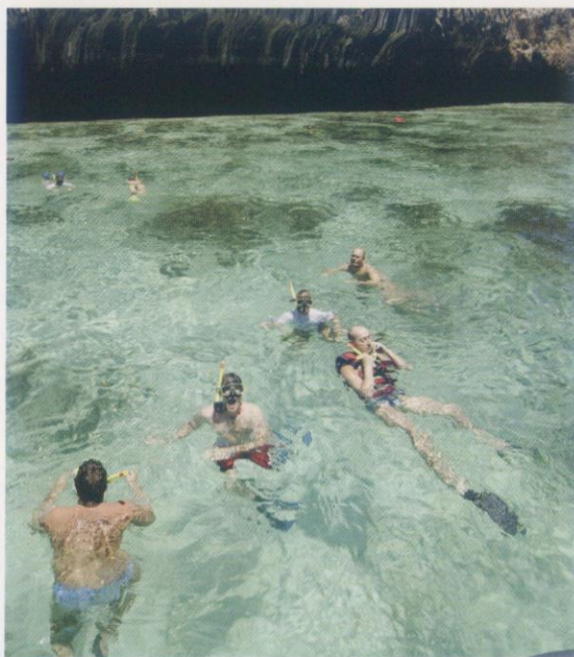

Visiting Route

Phi Phi Le

The smaller of the two main islands of Phi Phi, this one is uninhabited – at least by night. During the day boatloads of daytrippers tour along its scenic limestone cliffs and sail into Maya Bay for some snorkeling and beach time. It's definitely a paradise and as such is popular with tourists. The movie The Beach was filmed here as the sheer cliffs and curve of sand create a small scene of hidden paradise. Boats coming around Phi Phi Le will also pass by the entrance of Viking Cave, a massive cavern filled with the nests of swifts, the central ingredient in bird's nest soup and a variety of health drinks. Workers risk their lives to climb up to retrieve saliva-made nests the dangers, as well as the high value of the product, prohibit tourists from entering.

Visiting Route

Pi Le Bay

Another of Phi Phi Le Island's stunning sights, Pi Le is a long narrow cove on the east side of the island. Limestone cliffs rise straight up over 100 meters from the aqua-marine waters. Reachable only by boat, the cove attracts tours each day but is best visited at high tide. Early in the morning the waters are shaded a bit by the towering stone. The best snorkeling is at the mouth of the bay.

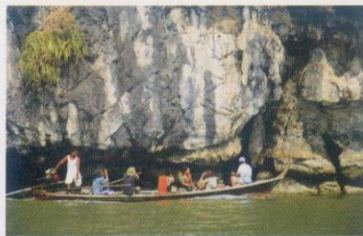

Visiting Route Gastropod Beach

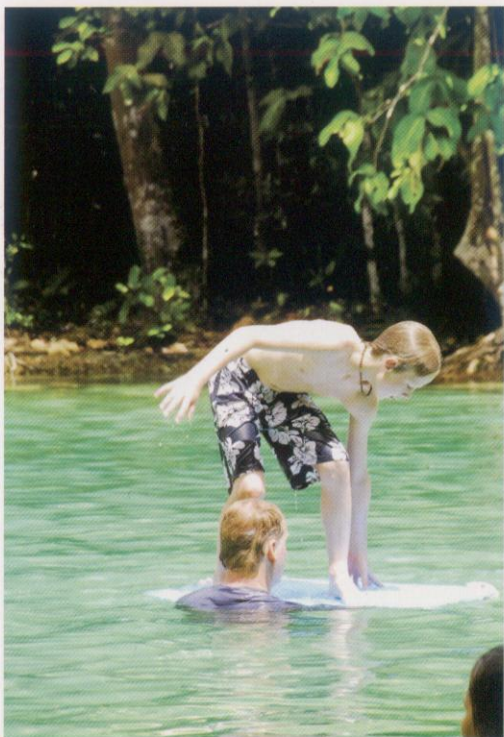

This isn't your typical beach with sand and umbrellas in the sun. Rather this is a beach well past its prime, with its history frozen in rock. Susaan Hoi, or Fossil Shell Beach as it is also known, was a freshwater swamp over 40 million years ago. Over time it became dry land and eons of change have produced a shelf-like limestone rocky surface. These plates lie along the seaside now and contain many gastropod fossils ranging from 1 to 5 centimeters in diameter.

Visiting Route Viking Cave

The smaller of the two main islands of Phi Phi, this one is uninhabited – at least by night. During the day boatloads of daytrippers tour along its scenic limestone cliffs and sail into Maya Bay for some snorkeling and beach time. It's definitely a paradise and as such is popular with tourists. The movie The Beach was filmed here as the sheer cliffs and curve of sand create bird's nest soup and a variety of health drinks. Workers risk their lives to climb up to retrieve saliva-made nests and the dangers, as well as the high value of the product, prohibit tourists from entering.

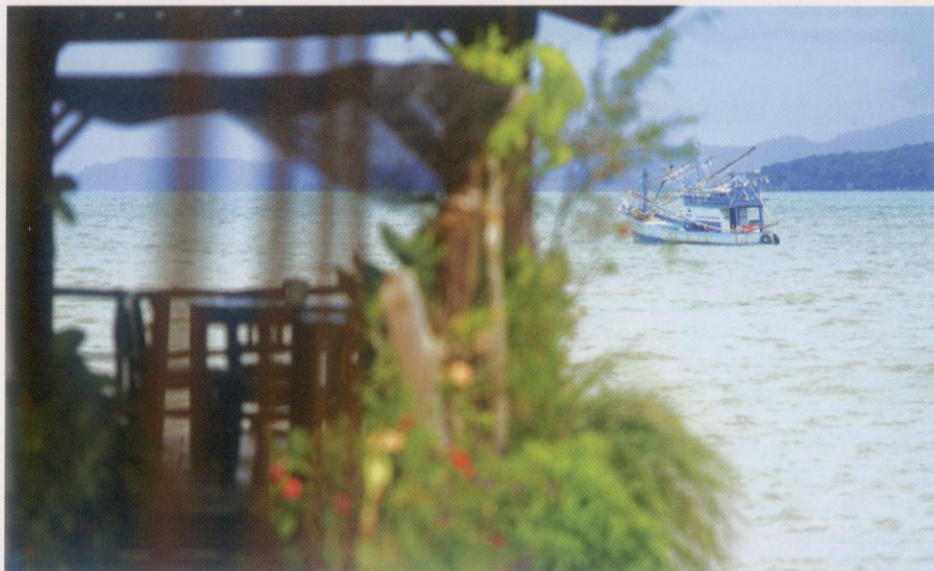

Visiting Route Emerald Pond

Call it what you will -- Emerald Pool, Crystal Lagoon, Sra Morakot -- but the beauty remains the same. This freshwater pool lies inside Than Bok Khorani National Park. The waters of this 120-square-meter pond take on a green hue thanks to an abundance of minerals from the surrounding limestone hills. Travelers can slip in for a swim to escape the heat of the day. A stream, one of the sources of the pool, tumbles in at one end over rock made smooth by mineral deposits. There is a fee to enter the park but locals often don't need to pay it. The sight of this glowing water in the midst of lush green rainforest is not to be missed.

Activity

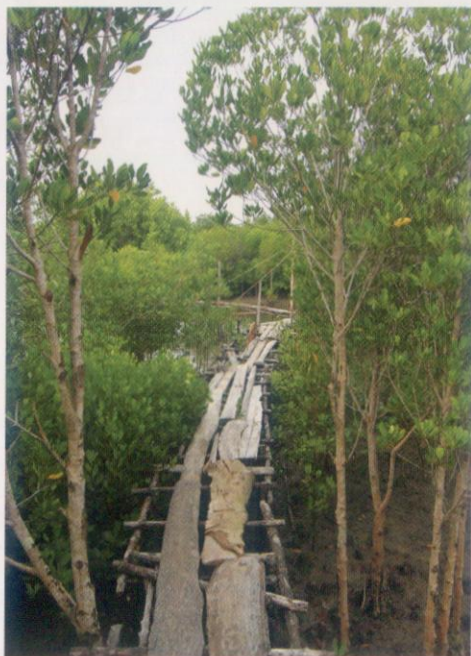

Ko Lanta

The twin islands of Ko Lanta Yai (Big Lanta) and Ko Lanta Noi (Small Lanta) are a lovely, less commercial alternative to the Phi Phi Islands. Only Lanta Yai has tourist facilities and part of the island is Ko Lanta National Park. Elephant treks to the top of the hill there can be arranged. Resorts occupy the west coast where the beaches are, and though the islands are not themselves dive destinations, some of the best sites in all of Thailand -- Hin Daeng and Hin Muang, for example -- are best reached from here by dive boat. This is the best area to see whale sharks. The snorkeling is also excellent. Go fishing by long-tail boat, kayak among the mangroves or even take a Thai cooking course while you relax on the islands less traveled.

Visiting Route Mangrove Forest Lanta

One of the eco tourism that will bring you to learn more about the existent nature is to explore the mangrove forest. Find out the place where the marine lives have begun before starting their lives in the real large sea by promenading along the wooden pathway. Mangrove trees are tall at the same height with average about 5 meters. Plants can be found are Avicennia alba, Rhizophora apiculata, Rhizophora mucronata. Here is where the ozone freshens up your mind.

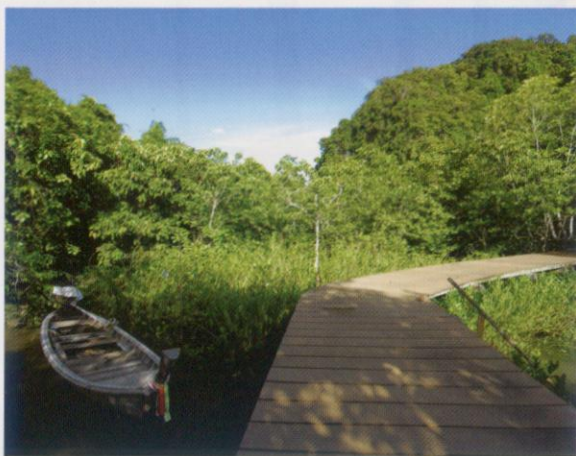

Visiting Route Saladan Village

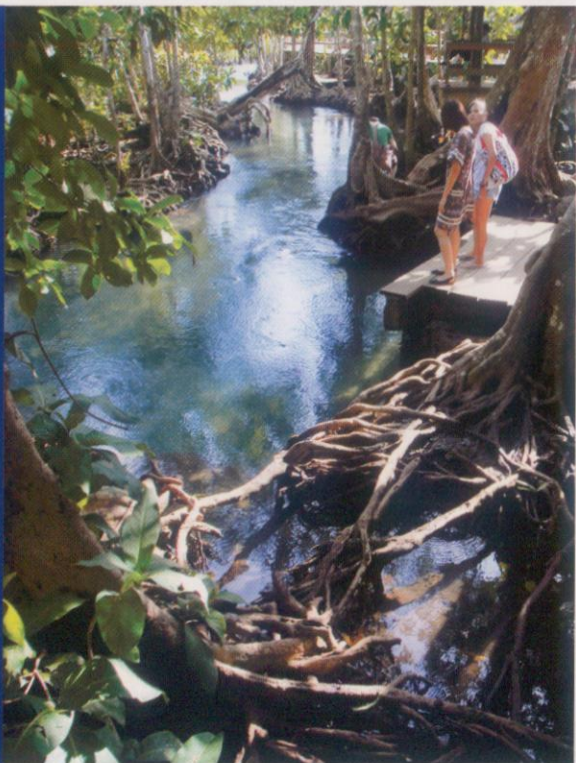

Really much more of a village than a town, the small Saladan situated on the northeast of Lanta Yai is the place where nearly all the visitors will firstly set foot on the Island. There is not much in town but you can find almost everything you need at convenient stores, clothing shops, dive shops and optical shops. For diving lovers, the dive boats dock and depart from here so it is very convenient to stay very close to them. Budget to mid-price hotels are available as well as a diverse restaurants range from pizza, burger, Indian food and, of course, Thai food.

Visiting Route

Tha Pom Klong Song Nam

Nature lovers will appreciate the beauty of this unusual meeting of the waters. Its name means "two waters canal" and it is the passage of fresh spring water through a shaded swamp forest. The natural park showcases the special plant life, including mangrove forest, which thrives where the river meets the sea. Depending on the tide, the alternating fresh and brackish waters rise and fall among the tangled tree roots. Follow a nice boardwalk through the park and learn about the environment from educational signage. Or take a dip in the bright emerald waters – but only in the seawater sections as designated. Low tide is the best time to come to see the clearest waters. You can also rent a canoe to explore the river near the sea.

Visiting Route

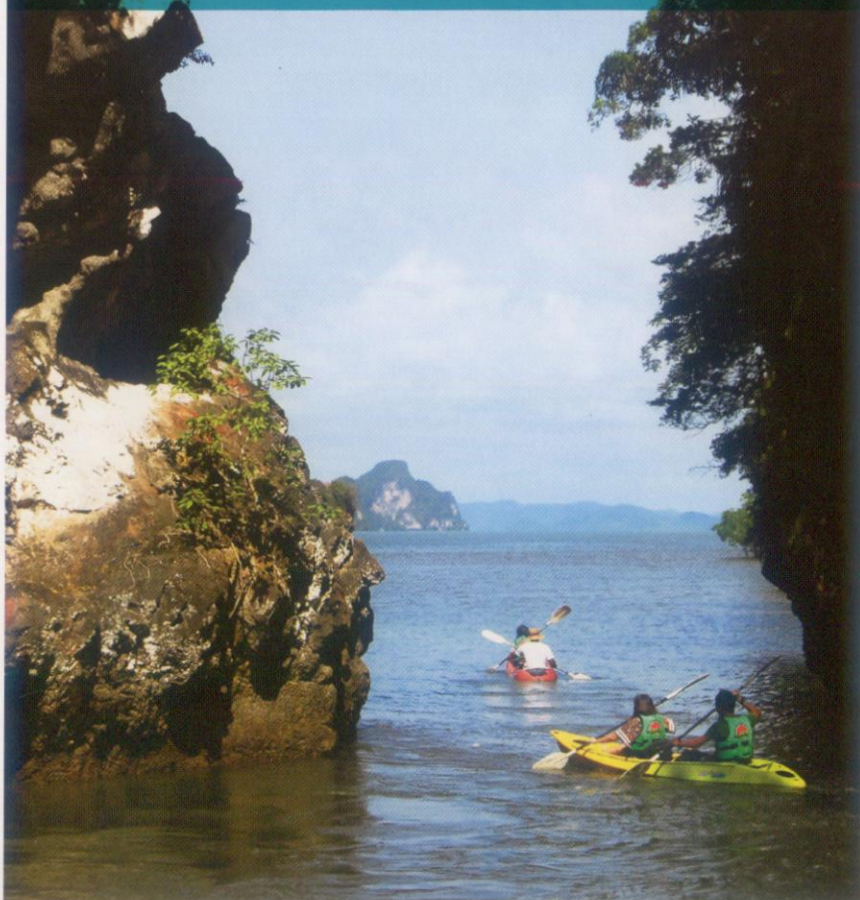

Namtok Ron Khlong Thom

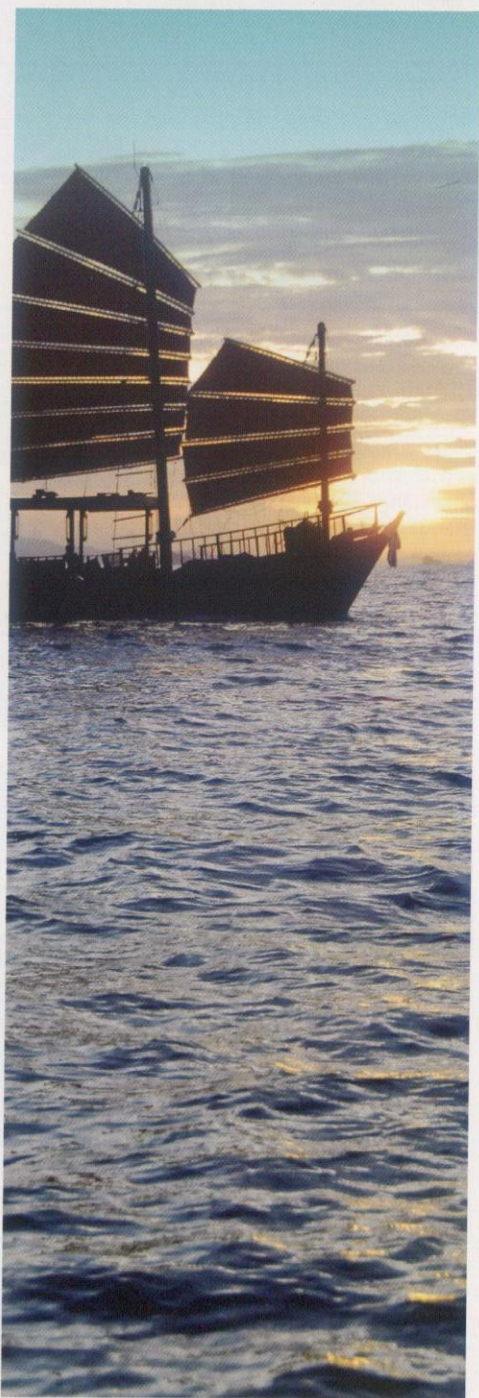

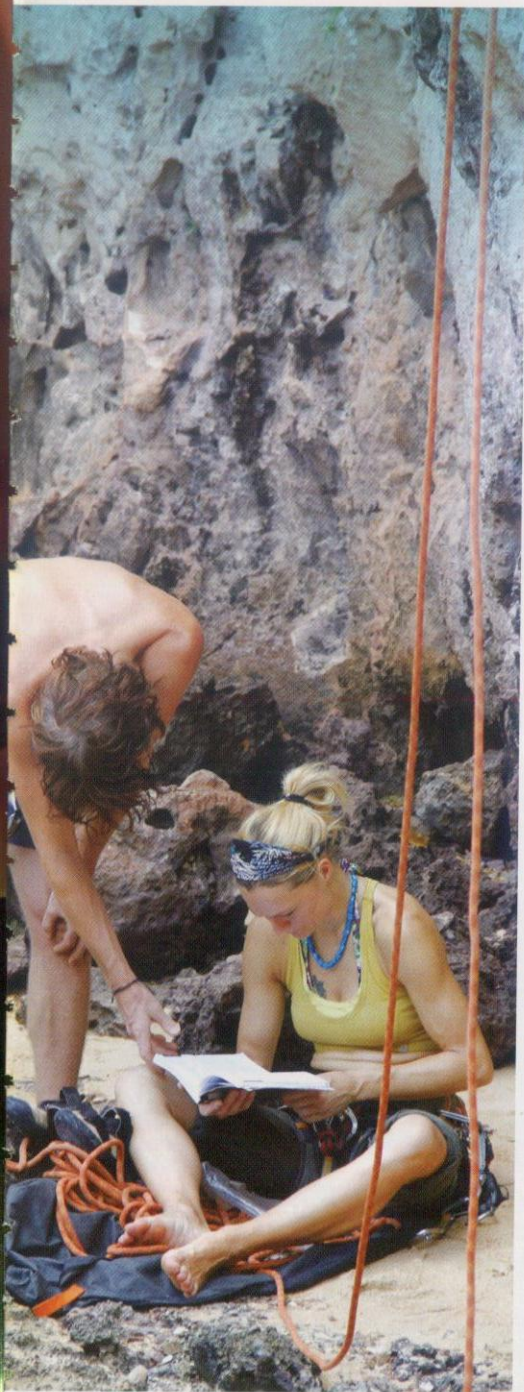

This is a natural wonder not to be missed on a trip to Krabi. Out in the forest about 40 kilometers south of Krabi Town is Klong Thom Waterfall. Though the falls itself is just a cascade tumbling gently but a few meters, it is unique in that the spring water that feeds it bubbles up from the earth at temperature of more than 50 degrees. It cools a bit as it flows to the cascade and you can swim in the calm stream below for a much cooler bath. A boardwalk leads through the forest and there are facilities here for changing. Admission is charged at the front gate where you can also find a variety of food vendors.

KRABI
AND BEYOND

If only gorgeous scenes cannot complete the trip, let's find something to work out. Adventurers can find a wide range of challenging activities such as rock climbing, scuba diving, canoeing, kayaking and horse riding while nature lovers will find bird watching, elephant trekking and boat riding trip very stunning and rest up an exhausting day by sightseeing the local walking street market in the evening or even having an amazed dinner beyond the horizon on the charming polished teak vessel. Nobody just can stay inanimately in this animated city.

Activity

Rock Climbing

The karst topography of Krabi can seem otherworldly – tall spires of limestone with exposed cliffs. While fascinating to look at, these towers of rock are downright irresistible for rock climbers. The most famous destination in Krabi, and perhaps the world, is Railay. Its cliffs show over 700 routes ranging in skill level from beginner to extreme. All routes are graded and bolted. But Railay isn't the only game in town. Koh Phi Phi Islands also offer some dramatic routes and even Koh Yao Noi is opening up for climbers. Deep water soloing is also possible and an exhilarating challenge for the experienced adventurers.

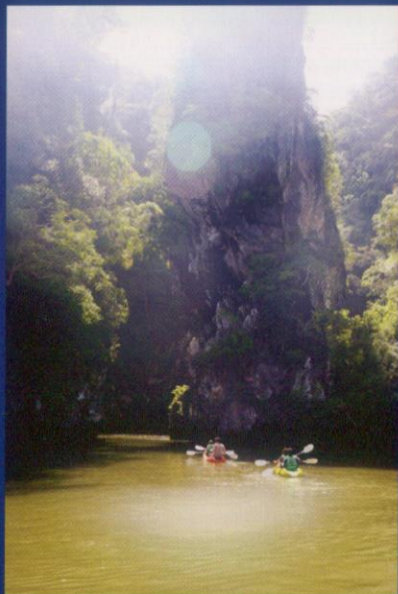

Activity Scuba Diving

The Andaman Sea is a treasure trove for divers. Healthy coral and reef fish are abundant and some open water dive sites also draw the larger pelagic creatures such as whale sharks or manta rays. Ao Nang offers some nice sites around islands such as Koh Ha, Koh Yawasam and Koh Si. But the most impressive destinations are within the national marine park at Phi Phi Islands. Many dive shops operate out of Phi Phi Don Island and have over 15 sites to typically choose from. Hard and soft corals abound while the occasional hawksbill or green turtle or even a black-tipped reef shark may pay a visit. Even more options await in Koh Lanta to the south. Also, divers can also book liveaboard dive trips to extend their range and dive time

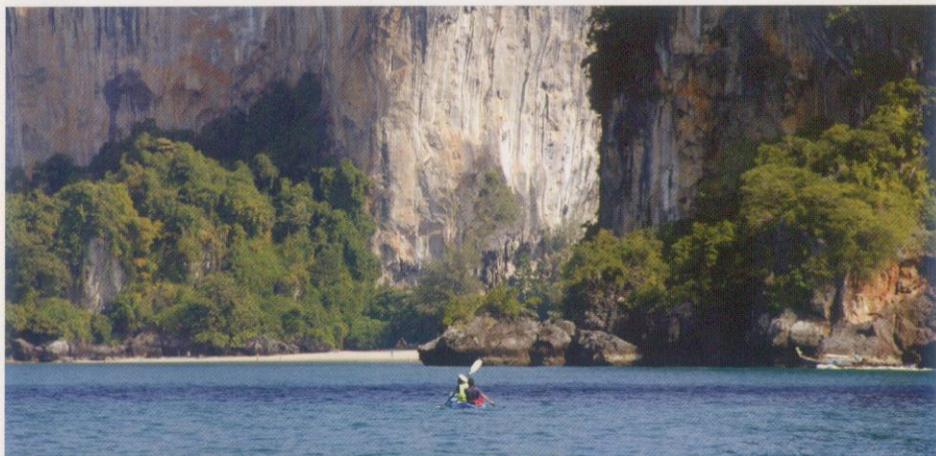

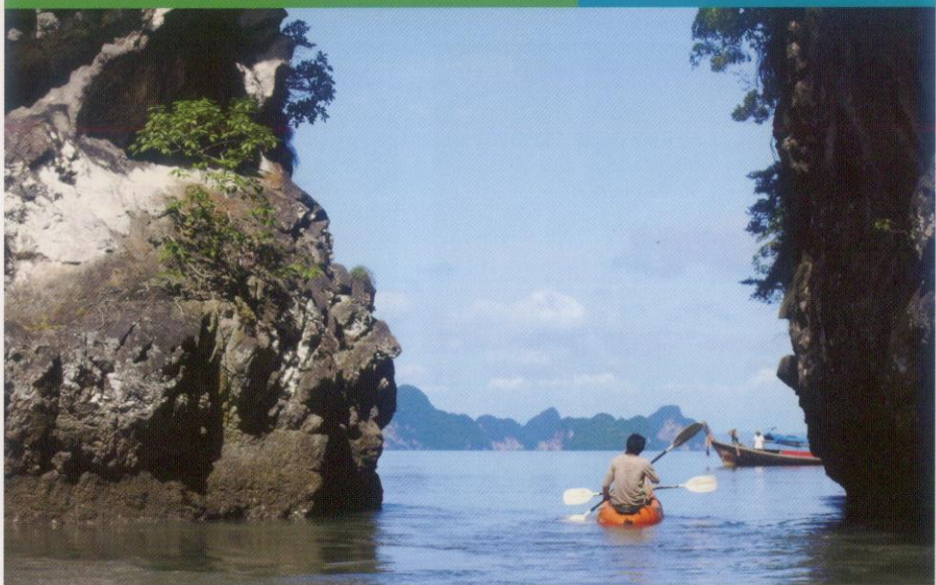

Activity Sea Kayaking

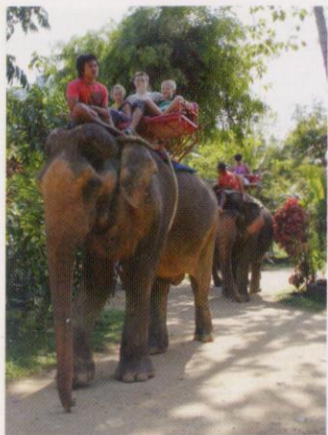

A kayak makes for an excellent exploration alternative to the racket of a longtail boat. Outfitters either rent craft out to travelers or lead guided tours into the typically unseen places that boat tours pass by. Head into mangroves in and around Krabi and see the wildlife up close. Paddle among the channels in between the limestone towers at Ao Thalane where monkeys venture down to accept food from paddlers at the water's edge (or even swim out to you). You can even go island hopping with kayaks. The hidden interior lagoon at Hong Island, for example, is often unreachable due to low tides. Leave the other travelers behind and venture into this turquoise treasure. The kayak can take you under the limestone overhangs of the islands and allows you to pursue your own path.

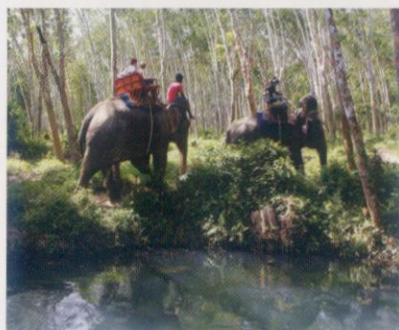

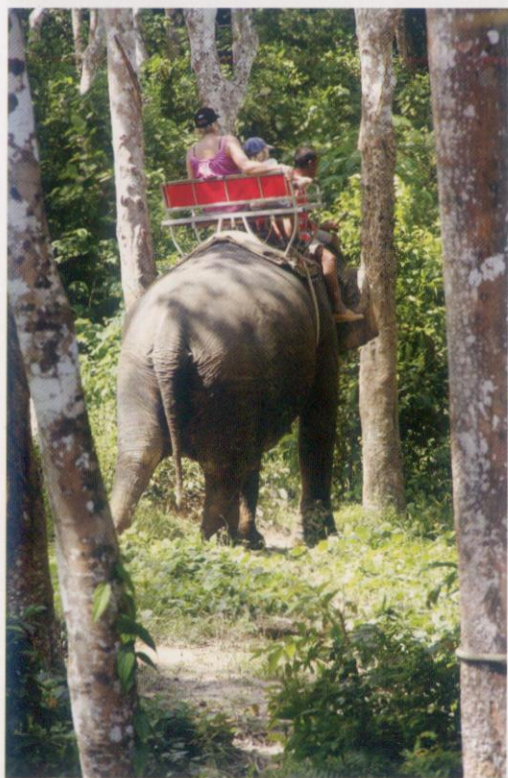

Activity Canoeing

Krabi is renowned for its amazing scenic limestone sea mountains and mangroves where adventurers can leisurely row through the crystal-clear bluish Andaman Sea to closely appreciate the beauty of nature. Many islands here are still uninhabited and untouched by civilization. Hidden in the islands are caves, tunnels and lagoons (better known as "Hong" which means "room" in Thai). When the tide is just right, ones can explore the "Hong", an open-air cylindrical tidal lagoon which normally cannot be seen from outside, via the cave where, along the way, can see the wall filled by the layer of archaeological shell formation. Other famous destinations also include collection points of swallows' nests which are used in Chinese delicacy.

Activity Elephant Trekking

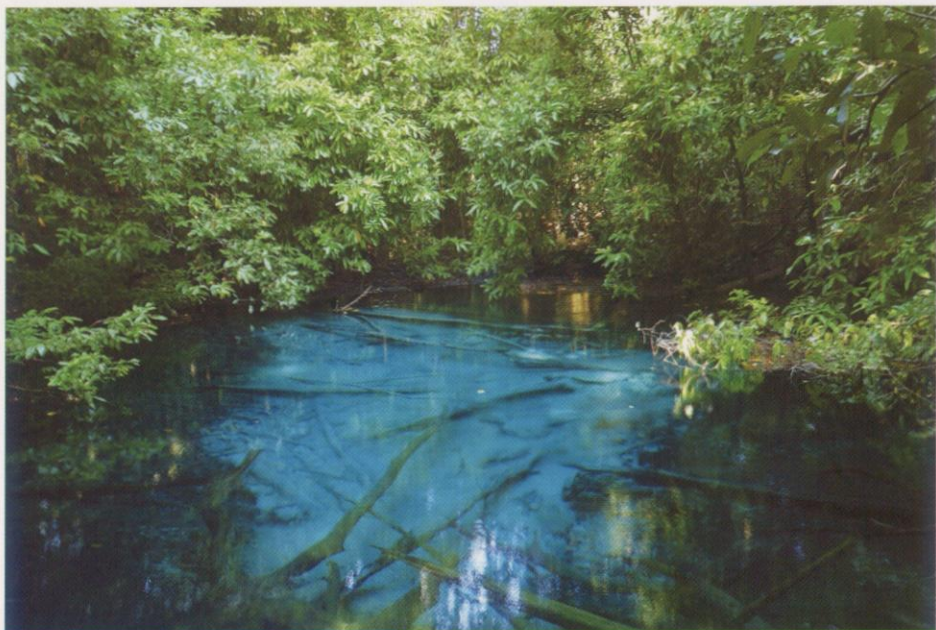

Another fascinating way to see Krabi is up on the back of an elephant. Elephant camps care for a number of these magnificent creatures and can host travelers for rides through the shade of the jungle and along crystal clear rivers. View other wildlife as the granddaddy of all the animals takes you on a gentle journey for an hour. Kids of all ages will enjoy feeding the friendly pachyderms back at camp. If the stunning views of the limestone towers of rock weren't exotic enough, try moving among them on an elephant!

Activity Horse Riding

Meet breeze, silence and very natural environment at Ao Nam Mao Beach and experience the surroundings in a different perspective once on a back of a horse which is led by a skillful leader. While riding comfortably along the beach, you can enjoy the things pass by from the limestone mountain, small typical Thai village to shell fossil beach, the 75 million-year-old petrified sea animals. If the sea is at the right level, you may be offered a chance to swim with the horse. How special!

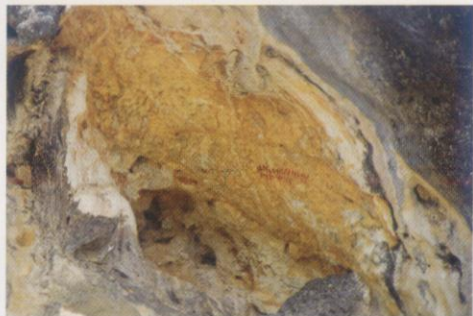

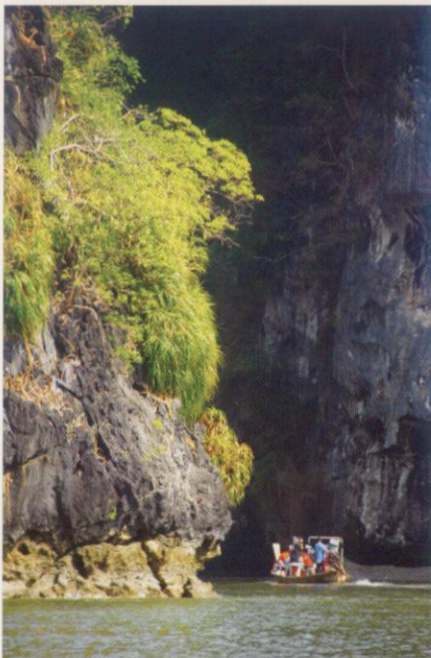

Activity Birdwatching

Krabi Province is home to hundreds of species of birds and a good number of transients. Even right in Krabi Town the river estuary is a perfect place to spot a number of species, including Nordmann's Greenshank and Mangrove Pitta, and explore the mangroves. One can hire a boat, rent a kayak or even just walk along the short mangrove boardwalk a bit. Khao Nor Chu Chi (Khao Pra Bang Kham Wildlife Sanctuary) is another hot spot and if you're extremely lucky you might see Gurney's Pitta, once thought to be extinct and still endangered. Koh Phi Phi offers some birding as well, in particular sea eagles and swiftlets.

Activity

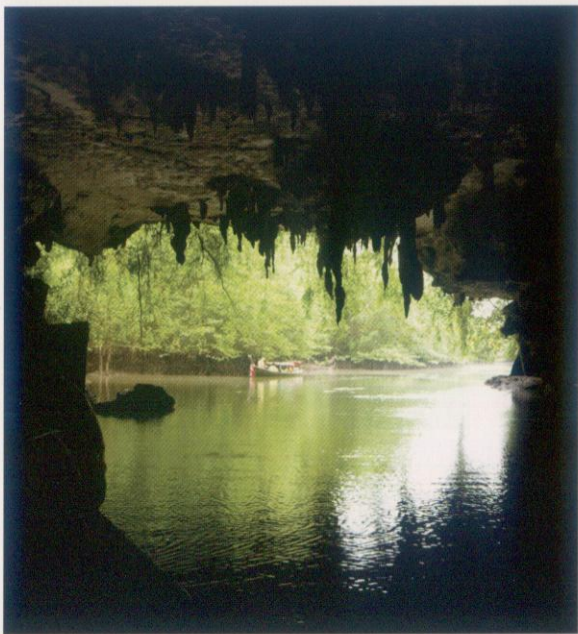

Pre-historical wall paintings at Kalos Island

Kalos Island is situated in Ao Luek district. "Kalos" (means "ugly" in Thai) was named by local Thai people after its weird shape. The island consists of limestone mountain that had been eroded by the sea for over thousands year, caves, mangrove forests and lagoons. Moreover, you can discover the more special thing here which is the 2,000-3,000 year pre-historical wall paintings of human, animal and some forms of geometry by taking a tour package or hopping in a kayak and paddling slowly in order to admire the scenery along the way. This path is very suitable for those ecology lovers.

Activity

Hua Thong Boat Ride

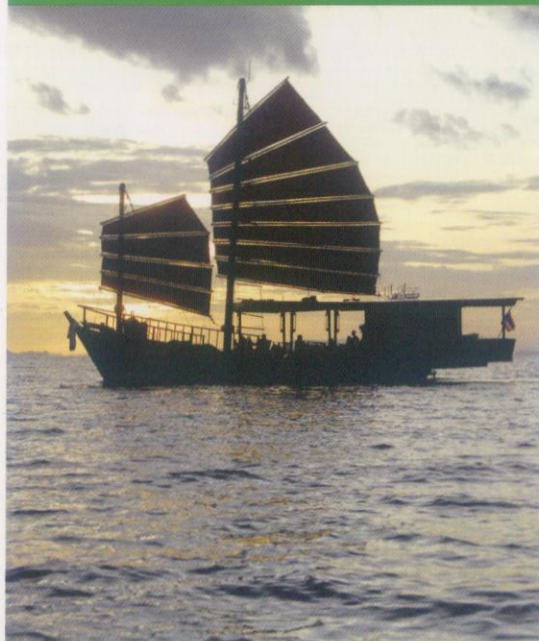

Hua Thong Boat or long-tailed boat was originated in Krabi and later becomes the symbol of the province. Originally it was created to be used for fishing only but now the new purpose was added to be used for transportation and tourist industry. Travelers who want to visit islands in the traditional way can buy a package tour and ride on the boat with the local expert guides who really know every single corner in the sea. During the trip, you are given an opportunity to swim, snorkel in crystal clear water, rich in coral reef and take a photo to keep good memory of life. Although the usage of Hua Thong Boat has been changed from the past, it, anyhow, helps promoting identity of the locals to the visitors and helps maintaining this old boat for the next generation to come.

Activity Sunset Cruise

Sailing on the horizon when the sun is dropping unhurriedly into the bluish sea giving reddish glow throughout the sky is an activity nobody should miss. Pla Luang, the restored Siamese junk built more than a century ago, is nominated as one of twenty places in Thailand to ask for a proposal. The charm of the polished teak vessel with its distinctive red sails together with great food and superb ambience of sundown on the coast of Phranang Peninsula will help much more easily for those who want to make a special event for their beloved.

Activity

Pum Thai Restaurant & Cooking School

Come and taste the 'authentic' Thai recipe here at Khun Pum's first restaurant & cooking school on Koh Phi Phi and you won't be disappointed. Who is this Khun Pum anyway, you ask? Well, she has been a cooking-lover right from the start. Been to the United Kingdom for a cooking class, then back to her home town to create her original dishes: a blend of her grandmother's menus and her own creativity. Simplicity is the key. You won't find fancy food at the restaurant, but rather traditional ones like Pum Fried Rice (Seafood fried rice), Cashew Heaven (Stir-fried cashew nuts and vegetables with your choice of meat, the recommended one is with chicken) or Khaw Nieo Mamuang (Yummy yellow mango served with coconut sticky rice). And if you wish to learn the secret of these wonderful dishes, Khun Pum have cooking classes, too. Prices start from 450 Baht + 1 free cookbook.

Thai food is famous the world over for its delicious curries and its sweat-inducing spices. Take a day to learn how you can bring those dishes into your own kitchen back home. Local cooking experts have opened cooking schools for travelers where you can spend a few hours shopping for the ingredients at the local market and then bringing them deliciously together in a kitchen classroom. Even if you have no skill with a wok, you are sure to have a great time – plus you get to eat the classwork when it's all done. Schools are located in Krabi, Ao Nang and even Koh Lanta.

Green Tourism

Ao Luek may be a small district in Krabi, but its scenic tourist attractions are plentiful. This ideal hideaway is truly the place to get in touch with nature and its unspoiled beauty. Hills, small and big alike, break through the open seas as if a magic spell had casted them there. Immerse yourself in the local fishermen's community, one that is perfectly in tune with the calm rhythms of the hills and waves, and be inspired by the happiness that they derive from living in sync with their environment. At the same time, Ao Luk Community-Based Tourism Network is ready to provide tips or help for tourists throughout their journey.

Various homestays are available at Ao Luk, once of which is the Raipreda Homestay Hotel. Located on top of a hill, the hotel is surrounded by an abundant forest and rock gardens of interesting shapes and sizes. The rooms are designed to blend in with its enveloping nature. To name a few, there is the nearby fruit garden, the grove of coconut trees, wildlife, and diverse species of birds in the forest. Further away, the mangrove forest kept active with many marine creatures—shrimps, crustaceans, crabs, and fish. Engage in the mangrove reforestation activity to help conserve the natural habitat that embraces so much of the area's biodiversity.

To genuinely learn about the local culture, don't miss the Patay Cloth Workshop. The technique lies in using a warm and candle and a pen to create intricate designs. This patay clothe, made purely from motivation and local craftsmanship, will surely be a wonderful gift.

Ko Klang Eco Tour

Ko Klang, literally translated as 'Middle Island,' is home to one of Krabi's sizable communities. The local people do not settle with being typical inhabitants, but instead seek ways to best harmonize with the island's abundant resources and natural charm. Hence, they joined forces to designate Ko Klang as an ecotourism destination. Discover their lifestyles through hands-on activities such as replanting mangrove trees, kayaking, or bird watching. Feel nature's grace while basking in the moonlight or while exploring the historical cave that had once been used as a prisoners-of-war camp during World War II. The cave hides more wonders in the form of intricate stalagmites and stalactites inside. Nearby, 'Kao Kanab Nam' stand tall, two bizarrely shaped mounts that have become another one of Krabi's signature attractions. Commodious homestay, spring up along the beaches, offering a serene resting place after all the sightseeing.

To spice up the atmosphere, Ko Klang residents annually organizes a festival that features harvesting competitions of shrimps and Thai escargots. Locals and tourists alike can join in the good cheer while taking in the coastal lifestyles and genuine ecotourism. Step into the open-sea museum filled with a diversity of marine creatures. The museum is in fact, part of the locals' fish farms, one of the ways the people earn their living.

If you travel seabound from Ao Nang beach in the southwest direction for about 8 kilometers, you will see Krabi's four important islands, each with their own attractiveness. The Poda Islands boast sparkling waters, vibrantly colored fish, and white, sandy beaches that are perfect for swimming and snorkeling. Thailand's Unseen Attraction, Ko Tab and the 'Parting Sea', highlights the natural phenomenon where the seawater recedes to uncover an idyllic sandy path that connects to all three islands. Ko Gai, or 'Chicken Island' as its shape suggests, is the ideal spot for snorkeling with its stunning coral reefs. Finally, pay your respects Phra Nang Cave's shrine and indulge in its natural allure simultaneously.

Krabi Walking Street

Krabi Walking Street was first opened on March 2009 in the heart of Krabi province. It is the place where Traditional Thai products, local products, local food, cultural entertainment, activities for children and other varieties come to offer both residents and tourists on Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. Although the size of the market is quite smaller than those of the big city like Chiang Mai but it is likewise packed up with tons of interesting things and has its own uniqueness. The visitors can see and enjoy crystal and cloth painted, open hat music and top games that many kids gather to play. Shopping

Is your pocket ready to be spent on those magnificent souvenirs? Shopaholics are advised to be prepared for time to shop. Here, in Krabi, window shopping is not allowed because all the items sold here such as pearl, benjarong potteries, Thai craft and Thai silk are worthy enough to be possessed and bought for your family or friends.

K.L.House - Souvenir Shop

K.L. House Thai Craft and Souvenirs is THE typical souvenir shop. The capital letters of the word "the" is no coincidence—K.L. House is one that countless tourists, Thai and international alike, must stop by on their visit to Krabi. Surprisingly, the word 'typical' is well suited as well. The shop features assortments of Thai craft products ranging from Northern Thailand's carved wooden statues, colorful silk scarves, cotton elephant pouches, traditional Benjarong potteries, and undoubtedly, local Krabi postcards and gifts. One may question how a souvenir shop selling such general goods that are not necessarily from local Krabi has become as well known in the area, but this very fact has become K.L. House's unique charm. Located in two combined townhouses, the favorable prices of K.L. House products are as conservative as their shop's atmosphere. Hence, these factors make it highly likely that visitors will not leave the shop empty-handed.

Whether you're looking for an exhilarating vacation, a tranquil getaway spot, a relaxing holiday destination or a culinary voyage, you will surely find it here. Catering to people of all ages and interests, Krabi Province will be a memorable trip for you and your loved ones. So get ready for some tropical sun and the impressive Andaman Sea, and delight in the various attractions and sights that Krabi has to offer.

Route 1

Adventure Route

Get your heart pumping and the adrenaline rushing with a bit of Krabi adventure travel.

Day 1

People come from around the world for rock climbing along the limestone cliffs at Rai Le. Experienced climbers can have at it right away. Beginners will find an excellent place to learn from good teachers and in an environment like no other. This can be a full day adventure with breaks for food and drink at the nearby back-to-back beaches or even a short trip over to Phra Nang Beach to have a look into the caves, best done at low tide.

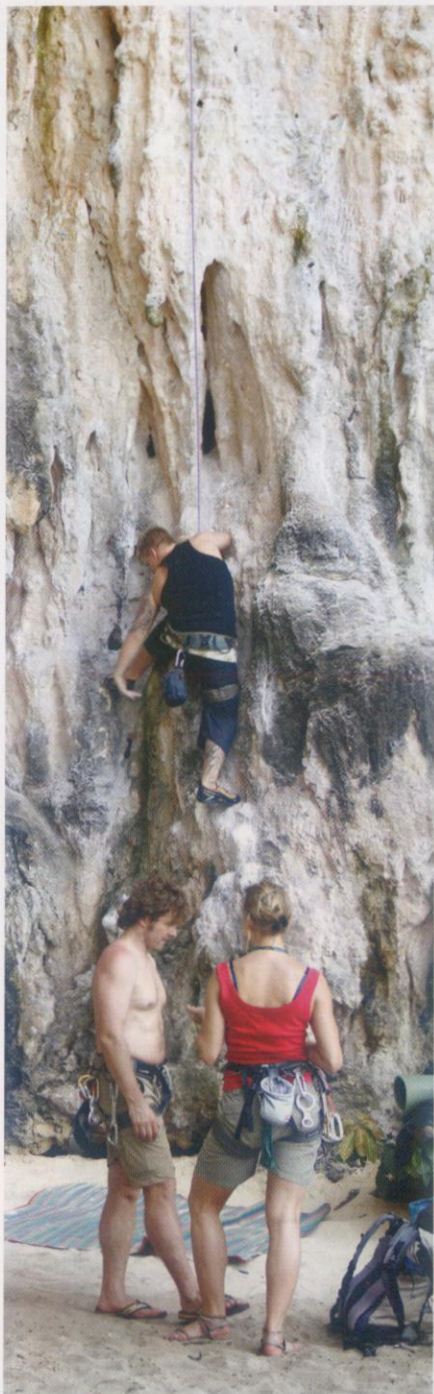

Day 2

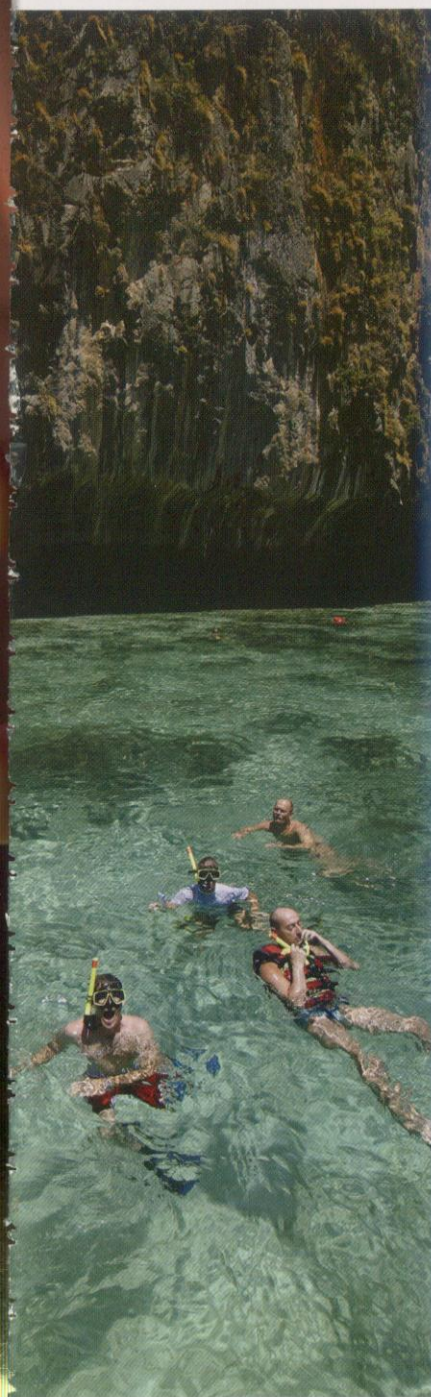

The sea life gets much bigger than those little reef fish you may have seen on the last snorkeling tour. Hire a boat for a day of deep sea fishing and, if you're lucky, struggle with a marlin or barracuda. Maybe reel in a tuna for the night's dinner. Return to port to eat whatever was worth keeping.

Day 3

Set aside a day to head to Ao Tha Lane. This is one of the finest places for kayaking in Krabi. Explore the coastal waters amid the towering limestone and see macaques coming down to the water's edge to greet the intruders. Consider continuing some kayak exploration by heading out to Hong Island. Whether it is high tide or low tide, the hidden inner lagoon is accessible by kayak while boats typically must miss the opportunity to see this natural wonder.

Or choose to head to Ko Lanta, divers be aware that Ko Lanta is the jumping off point for trips to two of the best dive sites in the region. Set aside at least one day to settle in on Lanta Island and a book a dive excursion (or two) by boat to Hin Daeng and Hin Muang.

Route 2

Cultural Route

The natural beauty of beaches, islands, and lush forests often take all the glory in the province of Krabi, but there are also a number of cultural activities you shouldn't miss.

Day 1

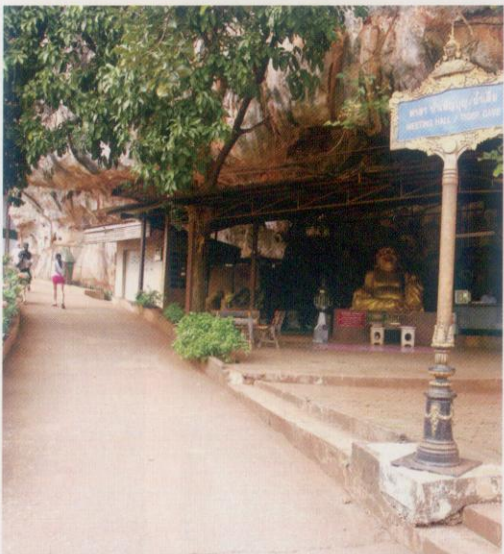

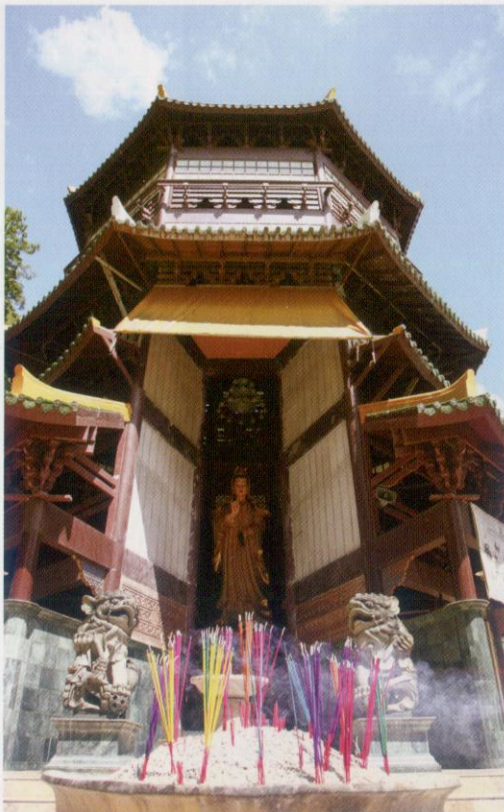

Take a Thai Cooking Class in Ao Nang. Most cooking schools can pick you up from your hotel. Join the instructor on a trip to the morning market to buy the products to be used in class. Spend the day learning some wok magic and how to make curry blends from scratch. You will end up dining on the final work of the lessons.

In the afternoon stroll along the main street of Ao Nang and venture into the many art galleries. Look for locally made products in artisan shops. Alternatively, spoil yourself with a Thai massage or reflexology (foot massage).

Day 2

In the morning visit the famous Tiger Cave Temple just outside of Krabi Town. You will visit some Buddhist shrines and stroll through a lovely forest of enormous trees. Then see Buddhist monks and local Thais making offerings at the foot of a Buddha statue inside a natural cave in the mountain. The visit ends with a long climb up stairs to an impressive view from the top of the mountain.

Elephants are a very important part of Thai culture and history. Learn about their lives and the relationship with the Mahout on an elephant trekking adventure in the afternoon. Return to Krabi Town or Ao Nang for dinner at a traditional Thai restaurant.

Day 3

Today is a beach day. In the morning you can take a long tail boat out to Rai Le and ask to be dropped off at Phra Nang Beach. The cave there is a local fertility shrine and the fishermen still make offerings. Lounge on the beach or swim until the "sandwich boats" arrive bringing lunch for the beach tourists.

In the afternoon join the Thais in a beach picnic. Nopparat Thara Beach offers the shade of casuarinas trees and a stretch of sand frequented by picnicking Thai tourists (and locals). Pick up some food in the nearby parking lot of this national park.

Route 3

Island Hopping

An island hopping mission could last weeks if you had the time. Here, however, is an itinerary that at least gets you through the "greatest hits" which may entice you to return again soon.

Day 1

Book the Five Islands Tour at your hotel or at any place along the beach at Ao Nang the night before you intend to go. Or show up and either rent your own long tail boat or try to join a tour that isn't full. This is a full-day excursion. Swim and snorkel around the sheltered bay at Hong Island and if the tides are right, sail into the hidden lagoon at the island's center. The tour will also make a stop at Paradise Island (Koh Lading), another beach tucked into the towering rocks and offering good snorkeling and swimming with views of similar islands very nearby. The tour continues with Ko Pakbia, Koh Rai and if the tides allow the boat to find a beach, Ko Daeng. The limestone formations and the erosion of the waves along the shores of these islands make for some fabulous photographs.

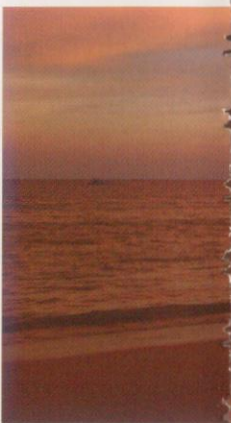

Day 2

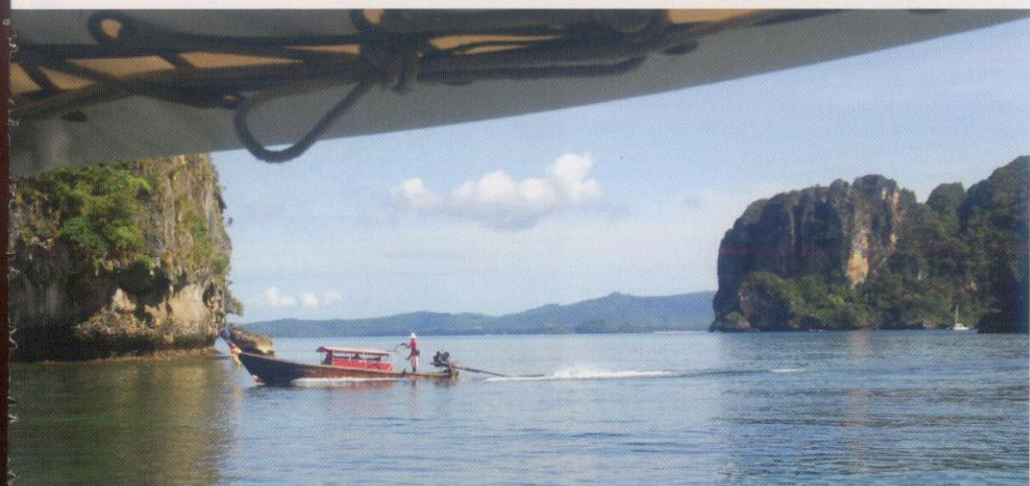

Hire a long tail boat for a trip to some of the islands closest to Ao Nang Beach. This day's tour is often referred to as the Four Islands Tour. Either at the beginning or the end you will visit the fertility shrine at Phra Nang Cave and its nearby beach which is part of the peninsula near Rai Le, not really a separate island -- though it feels like it is. Head out to the islands on about a 25-minute ride and to spend some time enjoying the lovely sands of Ko Poda. You can even walk the whole way around the small island or dive into the crystal waters to snorkel at the nearby reef.

Then sail to Ko Gai, most famous for its peculiar rock formation like the head of a chicken. But wait for the tide to go out a bit and its Unseen Thailand beach emerges. Enjoy a bit of beach time along this narrow strip of sand and even walk over to Ko Tub and Ko Mo on the temporary land bridge. Snorkel a bit more before heading back to Ao Nang. Stay for the sunset at Ao Nang Beach and the silhouettes of the islands stand along the western horizon.

Day 3

Take a long tail boat or speed boat out to tour Phi Phi Don and Phi Phi Le islands. The tour will stop in Tonsai Village for lunch but takes you along the dramatic cliff coastline of both islands. Stop at the mouth of Viking Cave where you might see workers collecting bird's nests or at least the guards who protect the valuable product inside the cave. Take a swim or snorkel in Maya Bay, and if you have time, try to see Ao Lo Sa Ma (Lo Sa Ma Bay) as well. The itinerary doesn't need to end here. Spend the night on Phi Phi Don and chill out in one of the local bars or restaurants. You can add a fourth day with a boat ride to the Mai Pai Islands to the north where you can really appreciate a sense of a deserted paradise on Ko Mai Pai or snorkel around Ko Yung.

Route 4

Nature Route

Enjoy the natural sense of Krabi Island and you will be touched by the magic of tranquility and the emerald sea.

Day 1

Start your nature exploration with a morning trip to Than Bok Khorani National Park where you can look for birds and butterflies and walk along a boardwalk and trail through the verdant jungle. The reward for a short trek is a visit to Morakot Pond where you can swim in the mineral rich water.

In the afternoon you won't need to go far. Namtok Ron Klong Thom is just down the road. Bathe in its thermal waters and then cool off in the river it spills into.

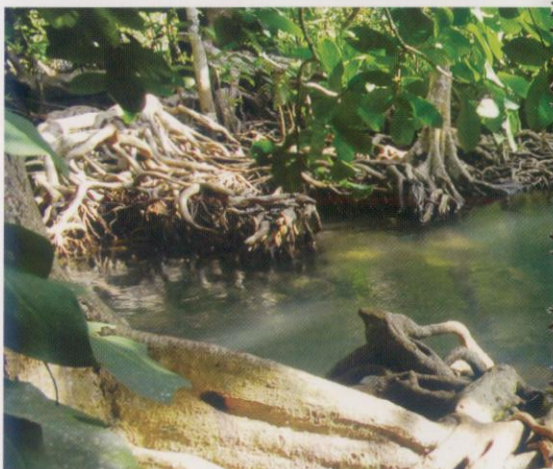

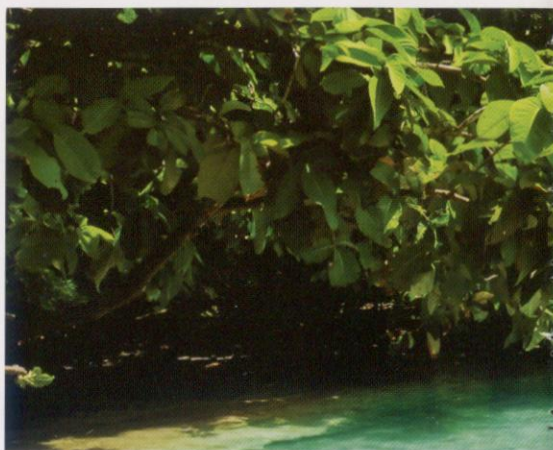

Day 2

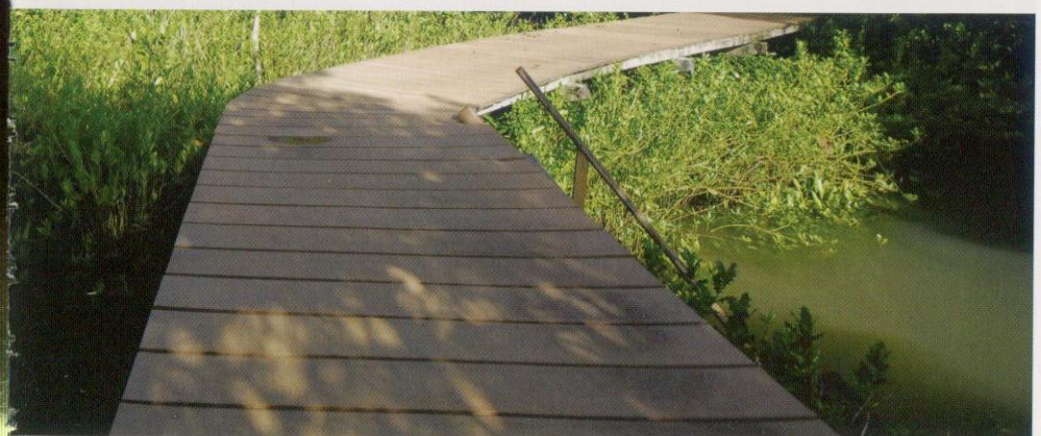

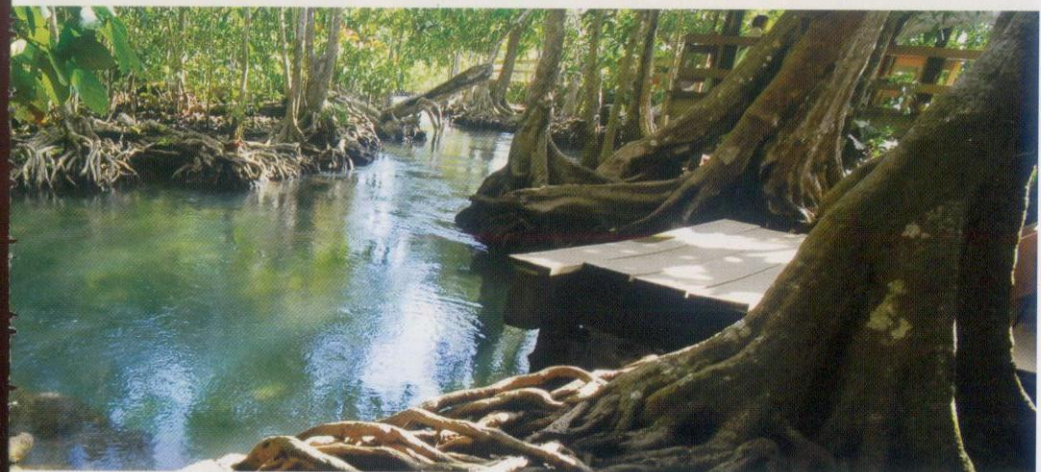

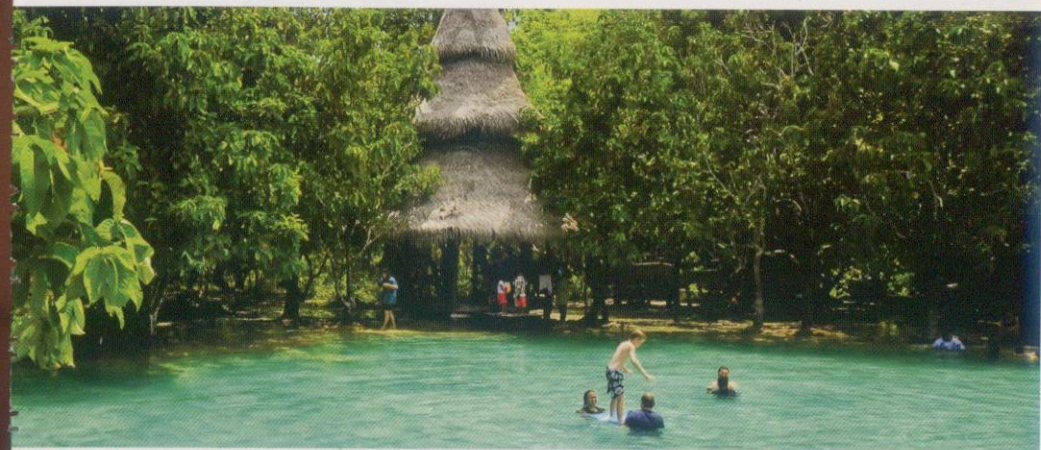

Where the fresh water mingles with the sea you will find Tha Pom Klong Song Nam, a natural park. Stroll along its boardwalk paths to see some stunning views of crystalline river water. The park allows swimming in designated areas and you should definitely consider the activity. Come at low tide for the best visibility in the water. If you prefer, rent a canoe or kayak to explore the mouth of the river at the sea.

Day 3

Krabi Province is ideal for birdwatchers with species numbering in the hundreds. Take the morning to visit Krabi Town. Hire a birding guide or rent a kayak and explore by yourself along the Krabi River.

For a look into the deep geological past of the region, take an afternoon excursion to Gastropod Beach. Venture into the sun a bit to see if you can find some fossils frozen in the rocky plates of this unusual beach. Take lunch or refreshments at the market adjoining the beach parking lot.
